Concept

In creating our music based passion project (Wallflower Wanderer) our team has connected with communities of musicians across America. These groups have fostered talent and culture that directly reflects where they live. Primarily driven by a love of music, they often create despite the lack of major label representation or radio airtime.

American Melodies

American melodies is an episodic series that aims to highlight these musicians and their communities. Each short form documentary acts as a snapshot of a musician's daily life emphasizing their artistic inspirations, community ties, and cultural impact. Episodes will feature multiple performances as well as scenes from the artists day to day life.

Style

While the edit will naturally parallel much of the artist's personal style and their genre. The series will have an introspective feel that leaves room for ambience and the beauty within the artist's daily routine. Filmed in an organic documentary format we'll combine perspectives to show artists both as individuals and as part of their community.

Artists

We aim to lift up underrepresented artists who have a unique voice. Leaning into the natural diversity of the United States we have a range of cultural upbringings and values to pull from while also emphasizing the benefits of our nation's diversity. Spanning across all genres, instruments, ages, and ways of thinking American Melodies hopes to give new breath into the vision of America's strength as a melting pot of cultures and beliefs.
